Hiss: Story Without
Beginning or Ending
Farm Market Here

There was an undue amount of editorial comment, particularly by radio commentators, while the trial of Alger Hiss was still in progress. It so happens that many of the commentators sided with Hiss, only a suspected liar, as compared to Whitaker Chambers, a proven liar.

Nevertheless, the jury which heard the case couldn't decide between Hiss and Chambers — and the Hiss case was deadlocked.

The government says it will bring Hiss back to trial again on the original charge — perjury — but whether it does so is open to grave doubt.

Hiss' name is smeared, of course, by failure to win an acquittal. But the jury stood eight to four for conviction.

In a sense the trial wasn't fair to Hiss, to the jury — or to the American people. Is it ever fair to throw into a courtroom a case where the issue depends wholly on whether believe one of two men, without any independent collateral testimony or evidence in support of either of them?

It confused the jury.

And it fills the American people with suspicion.

The only tangible evidence was the collection of secret documents, obviously stolen. But they weren't tied to any one person with sufficient certainty.

The result is that the Hiss trial leaves the American people feeling as if they had been reading the middle chapters of a serious story — but lacking both the beginning and the ending.

Whatever industrial promise the future may hold for our city and section, the staple facts of geography tell us that agriculture is, and always will be, a major activity of southwest Arkansas.

This is an area of hundreds of thousands of acres of tillable land, and few cities, therefore, are growing and marketing and shipping of farm products is our most important occupation.

It was so, back in the days when Hempstead county grew such a fabulous long-staple cotton that it carried a special listing on the Liverpool Exchange in England; and it was so Sunday, when our community opened the Hope Farmer's Market on U. S. 67, just west of town.

The Hope Farmer's Market is something we have been a long time getting around to. But it's tops among the things required of any city serving a farm territory.

And here's wishing it community support and good luck in all the years to come.

Uphold Right to Be a Communist

By VERN HAUGHLAND

Washington, July 11—(AP)—The American Association of University Professors today upheld the right of teachers to belong to the Communist party.

It did so in the face of a National Education Association recommendation last week that Communist teachers be barred from the teaching profession.

"So long as the Communist party is a legal political party, affiliation with it should not be regarded as a justifiable reason for exclusion from the academic profession," the professors' statement said. This reaffirmed stands taken in 1947 and 1948.

At the same time the AAUP — stirring echoes and Henry Wallace's cry for the presidency last week — condemned an Evansville, Ind., Methodist college for firing a faculty member who headed a local Wallace committee.

The AAUP committee on academic freedom and tenure, in its annual report published today, said five other teachers, in unspecified colleges, reported they were dismissed because of their support of Wallace.

The committee took no stand regarding these dismissals, however, because they were serving probationary periods and had not yet achieved full status.

The AAUP is still studying the discharge of three University of Washington professors accused of Communist activity, the report said. Findings are not expected to be completed until next fall.

Seven schools remain on the AAUP censured list. The list censures the administrative officers and governing board only, and informs the public that "unsatisfactory conditions of academic freedom and tenure" prevail. There is no reflection on the faculties or the schools generally.

A Negro child, Hollis Jean Hickman, age 4, ran in front of a car which struck down Saturday near Sanger Theater. He was not considered seriously hurt.

The automobile was driven by Mrs. Jack Arnett who rushed the child to a local hospital for treatment.

2500 Attend Opening of Farm Market

Formal opening of a local Farmer's Market, a half mile west on Highway 67, drew some 2,500 persons yesterday. It was announced today by the Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the project.

All of the visitors, many from out of the state, enjoyed free drinks and ice-cold watermelon donated by local organizations. Only a wily crowd of farmers stood on the site last night and all expressed appreciation for such facilities.

It is now up to the farmers who must bring their produce to the market if it is to continue operation. The site has electricity, a buying shed, a building, telephone service — all designed so a buyer and producer can transact business.

And the farmers who visited the market yesterday also were well pleased. Both wholesale and retail watermelons will be handled. Information service will be provided regarding patches etc.

Whatever industrial promise the future may hold for our city and section, the staple facts of geography tell us that agriculture is, and always will be, a major activity of southwest Arkansas.

This is an area of hundreds of thousands of acres of tillable land, and few cities, therefore, are growing and marketing and shipping of farm products is our most important occupation.

It was so, back in the days when Hempstead county grew such a fabulous long-staple cotton that it carried a special listing on the Liverpool Exchange in England; and it was so Sunday, when our community opened the Hope Farmer's Market on U. S. 67, just west of town.

London Strike Brings Action By King

London, July 11—(AP)—King George VI proclaimed a state of emergency today to deal with a crippling strike on the London docks.

The king acted on the recommendation of the cabinet after wildcat dock strikers defied a back to work call by the labor government.

A mass meeting of 5,000 dockers had voted earlier to continue their stoppage.

It was the first time the British government had invoked the 1920 emergency act since the general strike of 1926. Under the act the government is empowered to draft civilians — not strikers — for work on the docks, may confer extraordinary powers on the police and may commandeer buildings for the use of troops.

Viscount Addison, labor party leader in the house of lords, announced the cabinet decision at the start of the afternoon session of parliament.

A total of 10,278 men—out of the London dock force of about 25,000—failed to show up for work this morning. The left 112 ships idle in the tieup denounced by the government as Communist-led.

Word of the vote was flashed to the cabinet, which already was in session at No. 10 Downing street, the residence of Prime Minister Attlee.

Seventeen hundred troops called in to unload food ships last week were ordered to stand by in the dock area. The cabinet warned the dockers last week it would involve the emergency act unless the strike ended this morning.

Osa Johnson Now Lives on Park Avenue But Would Like Much Better to Be in Jungle

By HAL BOYLE

New York, (AP)—Osa Johnson, the first lady of the jungle, lives on Park avenue now — and it makes her homesick for the serenity of Africa.

"I like my jungles because I don't have any competition there," she laughed.

"Here you get invited to dinner and right away you start worrying about what you'll wear and what will so-and-so wear."

"But there I can wear khaki trousers and hunting boots and put my little gun on my shoulder and go out into the jungle and feel I am queen of all I survey. I can look up at the blue, blue sky and feel at home."

She said she was going back, too, for one last trek to the land whose wild life was filmed by her explorer husband, Martin Johnson, as she stood guard with a gun.

She is planning an expedition consisting of two station wagons, six jeeps with trailers, and a helicopter.

"I can flutter over in the helicopter and tickle the backs of elephants and ostriches. You should see the ostriches fan themselves with their plumes as they run. They make Sally Rand look like a sissy."

I want to make a full length color film of wild life there. I've never been done.

"Animals in zoos are out of their environment. They lose their color and become wishy-washy. But a wild zebra — he looks like black

Arkansas Soldier One of 5 Hurt in Explosion

Salzburg, Austria, July 11 (UP)—Two American soldiers and five Austrian civilians were hospitalized at Camp Trucott here today following an explosion in Riedenburg barracks.

The soldiers Corporal Willy Vamuel of Ellice, Texas, and Pfc. Robert Massey, of Garland, Ark., were reported suffering from shock and minor cuts. One of the Austrians was reported in serious condition.

The explosion, caused by an overheated boiler, occurred yesterday during redecoration work on the building which formerly was used to house Jewish displaced persons.

Violence Claims Seven Deaths in Arkansas

By The Associated Press

Seven persons died by violence in Arkansas over the week end.

Mrs. Mary Harlan, 52, of route 2, Atkins, Ark., was killed when she was struck by an automobile Saturday night.

E. V. Murphy died at Mountain Home Sunday of injuries suffered when his truck turned over near north Arkansas city Saturday.

Robert Allen, 37, of Walnut Ridge, died at Jonesboro hospital Sunday of injuries suffered Saturday night in a railroad crossing crash in which his son, James Howard Allison, 18, was killed instantly.

An unidentified man was killed when struck by the locomotive of a St. Louis southwestern freight train near Stuttgart early Sunday.

Trammien reported he was sitting, apparently asleep, on a rail.

George W. Jackson, 40, of Cherry Valley, was killed when he was pinned beneath a truck he was attempting to push out of the mud near Cherry Valley Saturday.

The other death was a suicide at Monticello.

Judith, Russian Pal Meet But No Longer Friendly

New York, July 11—(AP)—Judith Coplon and Valentine A. Gubitch met in a federal courtroom today, but they did not look at each other.

The purpose was for argument of motions in the espionage conspiracy trial. The federal judge William Bondy set the opening trial date for Oct. 17.

Miss Coplon was sentenced July 1 in Washington to serve 40 months to 10 years in prison for attempting to betray her country as a spy for Soviet Russia. She is free in $20,000 bond in the Washington conviction and on an additional $20,000 in the New York case.

Gubitch, 32-year old Russian engineer employed by the United Nations, was indicted with Miss Coplon on four counts, charging a conspiracy to transmit vital U. S. documents to a foreign power.

Gubitch seated himself on the left side of the courtroom today. A few minutes later Miss Coplon, wearing a green dress, entered and sat in the same section. Neither looked at the other.

About 10 minutes later Miss Coplon rose and moved to the furthermost seat on the opposite side of the courtroom from Gubitch.

And white satin, sleek and fat and glossy. And the giraffe — he's a gorgeous bronze. He glistles in the sun.

Osa has kept busy since her husband's death. She has published nine books and is now writing four more for children, based on the life stories of her own animal pets.

She is also compiling a cookbook of exotic recipes, preparing for a lecture tour and negotiating a television contract. She has a library of 2,000,000 feet of film taken by her husband on his travels.

Osa is still as vivacious and energetic as the day she married Johnson at 16.

"I thought we'd live in Chanute, Kas., and grow a couple of kids and a vegetable garden," she said. "But Martin had an itchy foot. So I went off to the jungle with him, and I fell in love with it, too."

She estimates she has traveled "roughly 1,500,000 miles" in her career.

She did pretty well for a couple of kids who started from nothing," she smiled.

Her six-room apartment overflows with souvenirs from her journeys. She writes at night under a shelf on which stands nine carved wooden heads from the Belgian Congo.

"They give me inspiration," she said.

The apartment walls are painted with African scenes against a background of soft blue and white.

There is a certain blue haze about the African hills you find nowhere else," she said. "The English who live there never say, 'I'm going out on safari.' They say, 'I'm going out into the blue.'"

I wanted that blue on my walls. But it took me 27 paint jobs to get it.

"I'll bet you," she said, "I'm the only girl on Park avenue who bakes her own bread."

Texas Governor Jester Found Dead Today

Houston, Tex., July 11—(AP)—Governor Beauford Jester was found dead today in his pullman berth on a train at the Southern Pacific rail way station. Jester was 56.

First word of the governor's death was received when someone at the station telephoned homicide Lieutenant W. P. Brown of the Houston police department about 7:35 a. m. (CST).

The lieutenant dispatched three homicide detectives, Floyd Barrett, L. L. Watts and Frank Murray, to the station to begin an investigation.

However, Brown said that as far as he knew the governor died a natural death. Justice Tom Maciejko took the train to begin an inquest.

Jester was serving his second term as governor. He took office June 21, 1947.

The lieutenant governor, Allan Shivers, also serving his second term, will take over as governor.

Jester swept into office with an overwhelming majority two years ago. His victory was over Homer P. Rainey, ousted University of Texas president, his arch opponent.

Clark Attacks Power in Hands of Few

Washington, July 11—(AP)—Attorney General Tom Clark today attacked concentration of economic power in the hands of a few.

He hinted that business "bigness" might in itself be a target of monopoly suspicion.

Clark was the first witness before a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary committee which began a three weeks preliminary investigation of the growth of monopoly in the United States.

While saying that "bigness in itself may be unlawful," Clark argued at length for the idea of limiting powers in the business and political life of the nation.

He suggested the committee might begin its investigation with a study of the growth of economic concentration during the war and the drift of labor from small to large corporations.

The wartime economy, he said, "played into the hands of the big corporations so that control of industry usually rests in the hands of three or four large companies."

Clark told the committee he felt that the "fundamental issue is whether the economy of this country is to remain free and competitive or whether it is to be subjected to private regimentation through monopoly control."

Steel Crisis Moves to Washington

Washington, July 11—(AP)—The steel labor crisis swept into Washington today in its rush toward a possible nationwide strike next Saturday.

Seeking to avert a vast steel shutdown, Cyrus C. Chang, chief director of the federal mediation & conciliation service, prepared to hash over the dispute with both sides this afternoon (2 p. m. Central Standard time).

He invited to the conference Philip Murray, president of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, and officials of several large companies including the pace-setting United States Steel Corporation.

Before the negotiations between the union and U. S. Steel fell apart last week in Pittsburgh, the union argued that the company could raise wages as much as 20 cents an hour and still reduce prices and make a substantial profit.

The company said higher wages would mean higher prices, and it refused any wage increase at all. Disputes over pensions and insurance benefits also were deadlocked.

The union has never formally demanded a specific wage figure. But Arthur Goldberg, the union's general counsel, said in an interview that a 20-cent figure was used in the negotiations by way of illustration.

J. S. Stiel says the average basic hourly wage is now $1.69.

In that connection, Murray planned to fortify himself by bringing out today in his other capacity of president of the CIO a new report by Economist Robert R. Nathan to help justify the demands of Cio unions for a fourth post-war round of wage raises.

Steel workers got a raise of 18 1/2 cents in 1945, 15 cents in 1947 and 12 cents in 1948.

Tomorrow Murray goes back to Pittsburgh to preside over the steelworkers' policy committee as it considers ordering a July 16 strike.

Such a strike would be of enormous importance not only in the steel industry but to all industry.

It would immediately involve about 500,000 workers covered by contracts whose "no strike" clauses expire July 16. It might eventually involve about 750,000 workers in basic steel mills and steel fabricating firms.

Such a strike, too, would soon make its effects felt in other industries (like autos) that depend on steel products.

Truman Withdraws Nomination of His Friend

Washington, July 11—(AP)—President Truman today withdrew the nomination of his friend, Fred A. (Bull) Canfil, for reappointment as United States Marshal at Kansas City.

Under the strategy, Canfil can continue to serve on his present term, since he holds office until a successor is appointed and qualified.

The senate judiciary committee has taken no action on the nomination of Canfil during all the months it has been before the committee.

It long a supporter of President Truman in his campaign in Missouri, Canfil traveled with Mr. Truman to the "Big Three" conference at Potsdam in 1945.

He is always on hand when Mr. Truman travels to Kansas City, helping with arrangements for the Presidential visits.

Report Held Encouraging to Everyone

By HARRY T. MONTGOMERY

AP General Business Editor

New York, July 11—(AP)—There was encouragement for industry, for labor, and for the public at large in President Truman's economic report to the nation today.

Warning signals were hoisted for all to heed but the overall picture was brightening for several months: that business conditions are downward and that steps should be taken to halt the decline.

The president remains, however, a leading optimist.

For business and industry perhaps the greatest cheer was the president's own abandonment of his January call for a four billion dollar tax increase.

Actually, industry's fear of such a tax increase died long after the January program was laid before congress. As the economic downturn progressed, it had become clear that congress would not approve the general business tax.

However, until today the president's official position had favored it, and this had remained a somewhat threatening sword over business.

With today's message the industry and industry see eye-to-eye on the general business tax problem: that is, no major increases should be undertaken in a declining economy and, in fact, some business taxes should be lowered.

For labor there was cheer and support in the president's declaration that the purchasing power of workers must be maintained, and that, although prices should come down, they should not be cut by lowering wages. The president said current wage rates "should at least be maintained."

For workers too, especially those in areas of most sharply rising unemployment, there was comfort in the president's call for higher and expanded unemployment benefits, and in his acknowledgment that unemployment is serious in many localities.

For the consuming public, which is all of us, there was encouragement in the president's estimate of the over-all situation; that inflation is checked, but that the economic decline so far has been moderate; that general business conditions are slowing, but are still good, with high production and high employment.

The president pointed out that real earnings have been maintained during the decline—that although the cost-of-living has slipped off in proportion, and as a nation we are not yet pinched.

The public generally will agree with the president that positive steps should be taken to enlarge consumers' purchasing power. It was cheered by his call for lower prices.

For all of us there was encouragement in the president's assurance that it is not necessary now to take drastic steps as might be necessary in a serious economic emergency, but there also was a warning that something must be done now as the economy slips downward.

Anderson Elected Member National Boy Scout Council

Roy Anderson of Hope has been elected as a member-at-large of the National Council of Boy Scouts America, he was notified this week-end by Arthur A. Schuck, chief Scout executive, New York City.

It gives me real pleasure to inform you," Mr. Schuck wrote the Hope man, "that at the annual meeting of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, held in Boston, Mass., on May 23 and 24, 1949, you were unanimously elected a member at large of the National Council."

Believe Hiss Favored, to Demand Probe

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Washington, July 11—(AP)—Two house Republicans apparently are working up to formal demands for an investigation of Judge Samuel H. Kaufman's handling of the Alger Hiss perjury trial.

Rep. Velde (R-Ill.) and Nixon (R-Calif.) are ready to back up complaints against Kaufman. They say he favored the Hiss defense—with speeches on the house floor. And the two partners on the house un-American activities committee, may go farther.

Nixon definitely wants an investigation and aides say he will fight to get one. Velde will back Nixon. An old-fashioned political scrap could result that would give a new twist to the celebrated Hiss-Chambers case, that so far has featured charges of espionage and perjury.

Democrats have shown few signs of letting the two young members of the house un-American activities committee get an investigation started. And they would have to have some Democratic help.

Kaufman is a Democrat appointed by President Truman. He is a federal district judge in the southern New York district. The Hiss case was his first big one.

Hiss, once a high official in the state department, was tried on charges he lied in saying he did not know former Communist espionage agent Whittaker Chambers as late as 1938 and 1939, and gave Chambers secret documents.

A new trial is necessary because the jury couldn't agree on a verdict. Eight jurors wanted to convict Hiss. Four wanted to acquit him. All of them quit for an agreement Friday night.

Then there was a rush of statements over the week-end.

Nixon said Kaufman had been unfair and there should be an investigation. He said political maneuvering in the trial, that the Truman administration didn't want anything bad to happen to Hiss because it feared there would be support for reports of Communist infiltration of the government during the New Deal.

As a member of the un-American activities committee in 1948 Nixon had more of a hand than any other member in developing the Hiss-Chambers case, and steering it through a series of spectacular hearings.

Velde, a newcomer to the committee this year, followed up with a statement saying Judge Kaufman showed a marked bias for the defense that said the judge bordered on judicial misconduct.

Obviously, he said, an inquiry into Kaufman's conduct of the case "cannot be sidestepped."

But Chambers' (D-Cal.) of the un-American activities committee made it pretty plain that he was going to have no part of any such investigation. Besides, he said, the judiciary committee is the proper committee to investigate judges.

In New York, Kaufman said his only purpose had been to see there was a fair trial and "the record of the trial at which he said Kaufman favored the defense. Velde listed an even half dozen "unwarranted perversion of the testimony," which hurt the prosecution.

Velde said Kaufman let Hiss' lawyer address "nothing but the remarkable question in legal history" to a psychiatrist hired by Hiss to observe Chambers. It amounted, Velde said, to "an illegal mid-trial summation."

Then, he said, the judge ruled formally that the psychiatrist could not testify and the question should be erased from the record.

Velde said the judge showed "obvious bias" in allowing questions about a book by Whitaker Chambers' family but not about two suicides in Hiss' family.

Polio Deaths in Arkansas Climbing

Little Rock, July 11—(AP)—Another polio death was reported in Arkansas over the week end while the total of cases for the year edged toward the 250 mark.

A fourteen-year-old Johnnie Ford of Hot Springs died there yesterday.

Deaths from polio in the state this year from the disease in Garland county. It was the 12th for the state.

The latest state health department count placed the total of cases at 242, an increase of 10 over the last previous tabulation.

A field study day for 4-H club members, which had been scheduled for July 13 at the Stuttgart rice branch experiment station, was cancelled because of the polio outbreak.

New Setup to Study Education to Meet

Little Rock, July 11—(AP)—A commission set up by the 1949 legislative session to make a study of the state's higher educational system will meet here next Saturday to name a director.

Rep. Harry Colay of Magnolia, the chairman, said the commission's executive committee decided here yesterday on a candidate, whose name will be presented to the full commission.

He withheld the name of the committee's choice pending its presentation to the commission.

Mrs. Malone looked all the doors in the rear of the Dude Hamburger Ranch, and carrying her suitcases and her winter coat, entered the bar for a last look around.

The wall-clock above the counter said noon. The Los Angeles bus would be along in 20 minutes and would stop here if she signaled.

She made certain that the hot plates and grills were properly greased to withstand the months of disuse ahead. She tossed the locks on the cupboards and cabinets where the tableware and china were stored. Then she closed and barred the shutters, and went outside to wait.

It was a brilliant, clear day in mid-September. The desert no longer shimmered in the full summer heat, and the straight ribbon of road had lost its tar-pit look and was hard and blue under the cloudless sky.

Mrs. Malone was thinking. She had had a good season. Thousands of tourists, Los Angeles bound, had been attracted by the log cabin, the shady porch, the clean rest-rooms, and had stopped for sodas, hamburgers, coffee, candy bars and cigarettes.

She watched the horizon for the bus and mentally recounted her profits. Plenty, she figured, to pay her share at her sister's for the winter.

A few cars passed, but for the most part it was very quiet, the wonderful quiet of the Mojave which takes hold of one like a strange music. No matter how many people poured across it, the desert remained untouched, pristine.

Mrs. Malone loved and feared the silence. It healed her frayed nerves but deepened her loneliness. Her widow-loneliness. Only by keeping busy could she forget for even a moment the loss of her husband Joe. Wonderful, kind, lovable Joe.

She opened her purse to get her handkerchief, but when she looked up she saw something that dried the film of tears. At first she thought it must be a moving-and-storage van or perhaps a truck towing some kind of a house. Gleaming silver white in the sun, it approached from the west. This thing, whatever it was, now took on the appearance of an armored fortress. It approached swiftly and smoothly until Mrs. Malone was able to identify it as an enormous trailer drawn by a car followed close behind. The "thing" had a tall, gleaming prow, like a ship. It seemed to be made entirely of chromium and was streamlined from bow to stern. A great boat-shaped cradle on wheels, glittering so that it hurt the eyes.

The whole caravan slowed up as it approached the log cabin, and directly in front of Mrs. Malone the driver of the leading truck brought the contraption to a stop.

"Hi, there," he called, leaning out of his cab, "is this a bus station?"

She said yes, it was, and that the Los Angeles bus was due any minute.

"Okay."

The driver dismounted. He was tall, black-haired, and in his late forties. A handsome fellow. Mrs. Malone thought, but somehow unpleasant. Also his face seemed vaguely familiar.

Quick, catlike he walked back along the trailer and opened a door in its side. As he did so steps reached out, unfolded, leaned down and touched the pavement. A young woman emerged from the interior of the great silver ark and hurried down the steps. Someone behind her handed out a suitcase and a patent leather hat-box. Silently the steps retracted. The door closed.

The young woman was pretty, in a faded-blond way, but her expression was so anxious, so troubled, that she looked older than she probably was. The uniformed driver took the luggage and followed her as she hurried toward Mrs. Malone.

"Do you know when the next Los Angeles bus will come?" she asked breathlessly.

"In about five minutes," Mrs. Malone said.

"Thank goodness! Oh, thank goodness!"

"I'll wait," the driver said, putting the luggage down, "and make sure you get aboard."

"No, please. I'll be all right. This lady here is all the company I need. You go right ahead."

"Mrs. Everson said to wait," the driver insisted. He sat on the cab in steps and lighted a cigarette.

Something in the way he flicked out the match and tossed it aside struck a bell in Mrs. Malone's memory. She certainly had seen him before. He wasn't young, but he was lithe and taut, with hazel eyes and teeth too bone-white to be his own. . . capped teeth. . .

"Don't try to guess," he said. "It was too long ago. You're not that old."

Unexpectedly, Mrs. Malone said: "I'm 38."

"You don't look it," he said. He sounded up at the sign: "Dude Hamburger Ranch."

"Do you run this joint?"

"Did I'm closing today for the winter."

"I'll bet you're a good cook," he said.

"Not bad, but nothing fancy. I like cooking, and that's what counts, I guess."

He nodded toward the spectacular trailer, which stood shimmering like a giant dragonfly in the sun.

"How'd you like to cook for her?" he asked.

"Who's her?"

"Mrs. Everson. She needs a cook and she'll pay big wages."

"Don't you do it!"

The young woman with the frightened eyes turned on Mrs. Malone with a sort of violence.

Quirino and Chiang Agree on Pact

Baguio, Philippines, July 11 (AP)—An informal diplomatic source said today President Elpidio Quirino and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had reached agreement on a four-point anti-Communist program.

The points listed as having been agreed upon by the Philippine president and the "pelted" president of Nationalist China were:

Formation of a Pacific union, a united front against communism, economic collaboration and further strengthening of ties between China and the Philippines.

The Philippines, China and Korea would form the nucleus of the proposed union. The plan is to get the union into working order as soon as possible and to extend invitations to other Pacific nations and Asiatic countries to participate.

The diplomatic source said an invitation to President Syngman Rhee of Korea to come to the Philippines for discussions would be prepared. Rhee voiced sentiment in favor of a Pacific pact recently.

Military aid was ruled out in the discussions between Quirino and Chiang.

A spokesman declared it needless that the conversations were "progressing very well." The question of economic collaboration was excluded at the moment.

Earlier, another spokesman had been agreed tentatively that the Philippines, Nationalist China and American-occupied south Korea should initiate the anti-Red front. Then invitations would be extended to such neighbors as Siam, Indonesia, India, Australia and New Zealand.

Chiang, with a party of 11, came by plane yesterday. He has set up his headquarters in a villa in Baguio since "retiring" as president of China. Chinese Communists now occupy much of the country he ruled so long.

Suicide of Negro Averted By Reporter

Omaha, July 11 (AP)—A woman reporter stalled desperately through an hour long telephone conversation yesterday while Mose Jackson threatened to blow himself up in his gas filled home, then talked away his opportunity.

In the end, a cool-headed nurse entered the home and quietly talked to him as Jackson backed away vainly trying to light matches, until a policeman, entering from the rear, seized him.

Mrs. Kate Tukey Ross, 27, a World Herald reporter, answered a phone to hear a man ask: "Is this a feature writer?" "I'll give you a good feature."

story," the man then volunteered. "I'm going to blow myself up. I've got four gas jets open and I'm going to light a match." A Red Cross worker in Germany during the war, Mrs. Ross asked Jackson about his army service, and about his wife whom Jackson said "I wouldn't want to hurt."

Mrs. Ross, after 63 minutes on the telephone, wept. too.

How Kaiser's exclusive new idea gave the Migliorisi family "2 cars" for only $2088

Says Henry J. Kaiser, Chairman, Kaiser-Frazer Corp.: "Our purpose has always been to make the sort of cars the typical American family wants and needs. That's why we designed and built our new Kaiser Traveler. It is the answer to the 2-car problem of busy, thrifty folks who don't like the bother and expense of maintaining two different kinds of cars. I hope you treat your family to the thrilling experience of a Kaiser Traveler demonstration real soon."

You don't need to leave the wheel to make a cargo cruiser of the Traveler. Simply fold down the rear seat, and there's your roomy, steel-shod hold... big enough for a double bed at vacation-time! "Mr. Miggie" says that on long trips the 123 1/2" wheelbase is wonderful. He never suffers from 'short car fatigue'.

Converting the Migliorisi's Traveler from a luxurious six-passenger sedan to a cargo carrier is a 10-second job. Here, little Vicky, 6, already has the tailboard down, while Frankie, 11, flips up the hatch. Says their father, "I change my Kaiser Traveler into 'shirt sleeves' almost as fast as taking off my own coat!"

Houses for People Living in Slums

(Editor's note: This is the fourth of five stories on the government's new public housing program.)

By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, July 8 — (AP) — Who'll get into the new homes built under the government's public housing program? What rent will they pay? The housing is for people now forced to live in slums or rundown homes because their income is so low they can't afford the higher rents in better dwellings.

Veterans and their families will get first consideration for an opening in a public housing project if everything else is equal. For instance:

Jones is a veteran. Smith isn't. Both live in a slum that's being torn down. Jones will have preference over Smith in getting into a public housing unit.

The rents will vary from city to city, depending on the situation in each place. There'll be a housing project. And even within one project in any one city rents will vary, even for the same kind of accommodations. For example:

Jones has a wife and three small children. Smith has a wife and three small children. They live side by side occupying exactly the same number of rooms, and the same kind of rooms, but—

Jones may pay a little higher rent than Smith, if Jones' income is a little higher than Smith's.

In each project there'll be a maximum rent that can be charged anyone. Also, there'll be a minimum. The least rent anyone can pay and still be allowed into a project.

Since that's an average figure, some families will pay more, some less. Every family must pay at least 20 per cent of its income in rent, minus $100 for each child under 21.

Jones, with three small children, has an income of $1,800. Knock off $100 for each of his children. That leaves him with an income of $1,500 on which his rent can be figured.

Twenty per cent of $1,500 is $300 which, divided by 12 months, would make his monthly rent $25.

What kind of income does a family have to have to be admitted to one of the projects? At this time no one can give a flat answer. It's too soon to say. But guesses can be made.

Under a public housing act passed in 1937 by congress, 191,000 public units were built. The average income of families being admitted to them in 1948 was $1,481.

The average income of families admitted to the new units may run higher or lower than $1,481, that will depend upon the economic condition of the country when the units are ready to be lived in.

But—once a family is admitted, that doesn't mean it can stay there forever. To be admitted at all, its income will have to be under a certain figure. (The amount will be decided later in each project.)

A constant check will be made on each family's income thereafter. If, say, Jones' income finally goes above the maximum a family can have and still be allowed in a project, he'll have to move.

That will be his problem. He'll have to find, now that his income has improved, living quarters in some private dwelling where the rent may be higher.

Through this checking on income, the moving in and out, over a period of many years many low-income families will be able to get the benefits of public housing.

The 810,000 units to be built under the program will house about 3,200,000 persons. With a fairly steady turnover — spread over perhaps 40 years — government experts think as many as 16,000,000 persons will have found homes in public housing units.

Must Remember Chinese Police Who Beat Up American Same That Served Under Nationalists

By JAMES D. WHITE
AP Foreign News Analyst
(For DeWitt MacKenzie)

The anti-American incidents reported from Shanghai occur in a Communist setting, but are not necessarily the direct work of the Reds.

The police who beat up a young American vice-consul are the same ones who served before Shanghai went Red. They might have done the same sort of thing before, if they had thought they could get away with it. They have no love for Americans, but considerable envy and prejudice.

The former employees of the U. S. navy who besieged the U. S. consulate-general in Shanghai at the same time, demanding more severance pay, also could have staged the same stunt before the Reds came if they had thought it would do them any good.

The point is that they now think these things may do them some good. This is because the Reds have been filling the air with anti-American statements for purposes considerably bigger than Shanghai. Envy and prejudice against the foreigners, always present in China, are coming to the surface just as they did when Chiang Kai-shek triumphed in 1927 and after World War I. The difference between now and then is this:

Chiang needed help from abroad more urgently than the Reds do now and so his Nanking government could not allow such incidents to continue. The Reds might be able to stop them now, but are not likely to because their need for immediate help is by no means so urgent.

Meanwhile such things can be expected to continue. A great many Chinese need little urging to let the foreigners—who have been around more than a century, living far better than most of them could hope to—know that he is tolerated at best and unwelcome at the worst.

The Reds have capitalized upon this because as the Nanking government grew weaker in the civil war, it became more dependent upon American aid or the prospect thereof.

The Reds said this showed that Nanking was a "puppet of American imperialism." The weaker Nanking grew the better this argument sounded to a lot of Chinese.

Their resentment of foreigners focused more and more on Americans, with the Reds helping at every turn.

The Reds have chosen this course partly because they are Communists, but also because they occupy a certain strategic position in world politics.

First of all, the Communist formula has worked in their case. Mao Tse-tung, the Red chairman, shows not the slightest sign of going back on it now. Instead he has said, again and again, that his China stands firmly with Russia in the cold war and will fight for her if it gets hot.

Mao is being more than just a good Communist in this. He is looking for the world power picture. His China, a Communist power, will enjoy some bargaining power with Russia. Russia cannot

Missouri Pacific Dispute to Be Investigated

Washington, July 8 — (AP) — President Truman today ordered action of an emergency board to investigate a labor dispute on the Missouri Pacific railroad company.

The dispute involves employees represented by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The order said the national mediation board reported the dispute threatens to interrupt interstate commerce within several states to a degree such as to deprive a large portion of the country of essential transportation service.

Mr. Truman is expected to name the three-member board within a day or so.

DOROTHY DIX

Dating Married Men

Dear Miss Dix: I was a young married man who fell in love with a girl in the office where I worked. We had an affair that lasted for several years. Then about a year ago my wife died and this girl and I plan to be married, but now without any reason she has thrown me over for a man she used to know and whom she had promised me she would never see again. My friends had warned me against this girl and I broke with her over her. One friend told me that she was not good and that if she had no more principle than to go with a married man she would do anything and that she was a gold-digger. What I want to know is this: Am my friends right? Am I better off getting rid of this girl or should I fight to take her away from this other man?

Answer: What have you to fight for? The girl evidently prefers the other man to you, or she would not abandon you for him with the end of your devious romance in sight and the wedding drawn near. Certainly the best you can say for her is that she doesn't know her own mind, and a husband is not likely to have much happiness out of a wife so fickle. There are a lot of girls who get a particular kick out of having love affairs with married men. It appeals to their spirit of adventure to have secret meetings and to know that they are risking their home and taking her husband from her and knowing how they make her writhe in helpless jealousy.

Evidently this girl belongs to this tigress type of woman, and when your wife died and she could have you for the taking, she didn't want you. You were as commonplace as any other man.

As for the lack of principle of a girl who goes with a married man, it is his fault. He is the one who leads her into a wrong. And when you do find her, be faithful to her yourself.

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix: Don't you think brothers should treat their sisters as if they were human beings? Brothers seem to be different people when they are around their girls. They are smiling and chatty and help them into cars and over curbs, while they never have a word to say to their sisters when they can climb over a wheel the best way they can. Of course, I don't expect my brother to treat me as though I were his best girl, but I would like him to talk to me once in a while and take me out occasionally and I think he might introduce his friends to me and when he goes out get a date for me.

A BEWILDERED SISTER
Answer: It has been said that no brother can ever imagine what any other man ever sees in his sister to make him fall in love with her, but I don't think the disillusion of brothers is quite as bad as that. I think most brothers are very fond of their sisters, only they don't feel that they have to go to any trouble to make things pleasant for them.

Of course, a brother can do a lot for a sister if he wants to. He can bring nice boys to the house and give her a chance to get acquainted with them. And he can take her to places and give her a good time. Above all, he can give her a lot of hints about how to make herself popular with boys and he can be the best chaperon in the world because they are in the same crowd and he knows

Believe Youth Is Hanged Accidentally

Chicago, July 7 — (UP) — Four-year-old Thomas Laux was found strangled and stuffed into a sack in the basement headquarters of a long-time hangmen's "Noose Club" today and police began questioning the club's members for questioning.

Mrs. Ernest Munday, 49-year-old mother who found the boy, was taken to police headquarters for lie detector tests about unusual circumstances in reporting the discovery of the body. Her sons, Robert, 15, and Charles, 13, and her husband, were questioned but were not given lie tests.

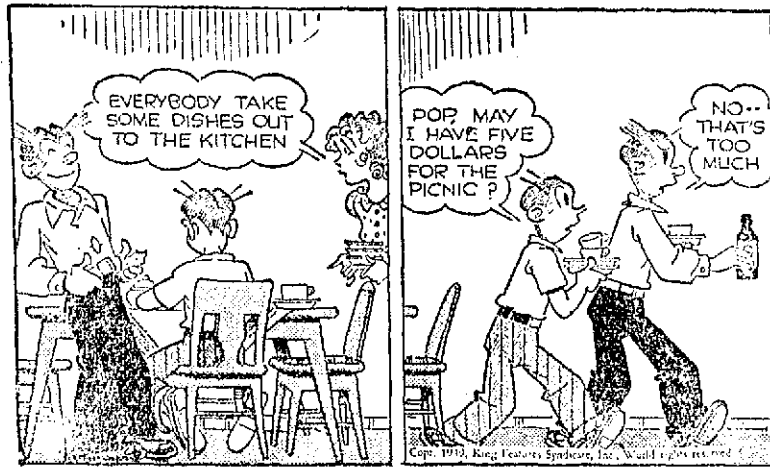

Police theorized that the Laux child, who had been missing more than 12 hours, had been killed accidentally in "a hanging game."
